Hand Made Suits Retain Their Shape

And they are the only kind that will, whether ready made or made to order. That's why a high priced custom suit holds its shape and a cheap one doesn't. That's why there is so much kicking about the $18 and $20 custom suits. They're machine made, thrown together, and of course they won't hold shape.

Our $8, $10 and $15 Kirschbaum suits are made and trimmed infinitely better, and THEY hold their shapes. We have the honor of handling the only line

The Impeachment of Judge Kroll.

By ELLIOTT FLOWER.

"Punctuality," said Lyman Kroll, with emphasis, "is the underlying principle of household law. All other virtues are largely dependent on that. The court will begin its day session."

Lyman Kroll was a man of ideas as well as a man who was exasperatingly particular in some ways. Punctuality—truly a most commendable trait or habit—was his hobby. He hated to be kept waiting; in fact, he considered it one of the worst of offenses to be kept waiting, and he was determined that his children should be brought up properly. He had lectured them and he had punished them; yet they were still occasionally guilty of this heinous offense. He had now established a household court as an amusing method of impressing upon them the importance of punctuality.

"Who's the judge?" demanded Tom Kroll, who had serious doubts as to how he would come out in the court proceedings.

"I am," answered his father.

"And who's the prosecuting attorney?" persisted Tom.

"Your mother," his father replied. "She may begin proceedings on her own initiative or on the strength of information furnished her."

"And the supreme court?" suggested Tom.

"There isn't any," said his father. "This is the court of last resort."

"Oh, no," protested all the children; "that's arbitrary."

"Well, then," returned Lyman Kroll, "your grandfather may be the supreme court. He hasn't much of anything else to do except to review the findings of the lower court, but he wants to be mighty careful how he exercises his authority."

Grandfather Kroll took his pipe from his mouth and nodded solemnly.

"Court is in session," announced Lyman Kroll. "Are there any cases to be heard?"

A silence followed.

"What's the matter with the prosecuting attorney?" demanded the judge.

"I wish you wouldn't bother me now, Lyman," said Mrs. Kroll, looking up from the book she was trying to read. "This is the first minute I've had to myself today."

"This court," asserted the judge, "begins its session promptly at 7:30 o'clock every evening, and if any of its officers are dilatory they will be subject to impeachment and a fine."

Mrs. Kroll sighed and shut her book.

"How foolish!" she remarked.

"Content of court," announced the judge, decisively. "Fine, 25 cents."

Mrs. Kroll looked startled, but she got her purse and extracted a quarter from it.

"Who gets the fines?" she asked.

"The judge pointed to a toy bank he had brought home."

"They go into that," he said, "and we'll decide what to do with them later. Now, what business is before the court?"

"Ethel was late at breakfast this morning," said the prosecuting attorney, as she put the quarter in the bank.

"Any defense?" asked the judge.

"I didn't hear the rising bell," explained the girl.

"Bring in Mary, the maid," ordered the judge, and the astonished maid was called in from the dining room where she was at work. "Mary," said the judge, "did you ring the rising bell this morning?"

"Yes, sir," answered the maid.

"At the usual time?"

"Yes, sir," answered the judge.

"Mabel kept her music teacher waiting five minutes," said the prosecuting attorney.

"I'll assess her a cent a minute," said the judge, "and she can pay or go to jail for one hour."

"Tom didn't get home from school this noon until we were nearly dark," said the prosecuting attorney, "and the statement of the next case."

"I was kept after school," protested Tom.

"Why?" inquired the judge.

"Because—well, because I was tardy," replied Tom, with some hesitancy.

"Worse and worse," announced the judge. "Fine, 25 cents."

"I'll take five hours in my room instead," said Tom, doggedly.

"You won't get it," retorted the judge. "You'll pay the fine or you'll be in jail for one hour."

"Make it 10 a day," urged Tom.

"Five!" said the judge.

"I'll pay," announced Tom.

"I guess you children will learn to be punctual after awhile," remarked the judge. "Any more business?"

Read It in His Newspaper.

George Schaub, a well-known German citizen of New Lebanon, Ohio, is a constant reader of the Dayton Volkszeitung.

He knows that this paper aims to advertise only the best in its columns, and when he saw Chamberlain's Pain Balm advertised therein for a long time, he did not hesitate in buying a bottle of it for his wife, who for eight weeks had suffered with the most terrible pains in her back and could get no relief. He says: "After using Pain Balm for a few days my wife said to me, 'I feel as though born anew,' and before using the entire contents of the bottle the unbearable pains had entirely vanished and she could again take up her household duties." He is very thankful and hopes that all suffering likewise will hear of his wonderful recovery. This valuable liniment is for sale by Ackerman & Stewart, druggists.
